Are you anticipating dramatic changes and developments in the information industry?

Do you want to learn about the importance of interdependence in the new millennium?

Prepare yourself to contribute to a global economy driven by information, and attend the...

91st Annual Conference
Philadelphia, PA, USA
June 10-15, 2000

Independence to Interdependence: The Next Phase in the Information Revolution

Philadelphia in the year 2000 is where our past and future converge for the 91st Annual Conference of the Special Libraries Association. In our many and varied roles as information professionals, we have a unique relationship with history. Not only have we experienced firsthand the changes wrought by the information revolution, particularly in the past century, but we are pursuing new ways to harness information and communications technology not only to access and present the knowledge which fuels that information economy, but also to preserve it for the future. In effect, at the dawn of the next millennium, we are helping to create tomorrow's history today.

In the twenty-first century, we can expect that the rapid flow of information will continue to highlight interdependence—among people, communities, organizations, governments, and throughout the world. As information professionals, we truly are in the vanguard in this next phase of the information revolution.

The theme of this conference, Independence to Interdependence: The Next Phase in the Information Revolution, to be held in a pivotal year, thus recognizes the dynamic and evolutionary nature of the phenomenon known as the “information revolution” and looks forward to the next stage in its development. Those changes will affect all of us, but we will also be in a unique position to affect those changes.

See you next year in Philadelphia! Don't be left out!
Plan to attend the 91st Annual Conference.
Join fellow information professionals as we create history!

Stay informed!

The Information Age:

Date: October 16-19, 2000

Global 2000

Please note: Global 2000 is specifically targeted to an international audience and will be smaller and more focused in content than Annual Conference. Attendance is limited to 800-1200 participants.

Although very different in nature, the 91st Annual Conference and Global 2000 in Brighton, England will provide members with many opportunities to broaden their knowledge and increase their networking base. However, it is important to note that Global 2000 (October) WILL NOT replace Annual Conference (June) -- Annual Conference is still SLA's main event for that year.

Global 2000 aims to expand international cooperation among special libraries, librarians and information centers throughout the world. The Conference will benefit all information specialists in their mutual exchange of the applications of technology, planning and ideas.

Global 2000 theme: The Information Age: Challenges & Opportunities encompasses the major factors affecting the origins of information, the use of information, the growth and speed of exchange of information, its flow between nations and the economics of access to information.
